Behaviour:

Amir, you are a very responsible person, you finish your tasks really fast, you take initiative when most of the team doesn't, but I think that you are able to bring the team a lot more value if you would try to take advantage of the fact that you are good at taking initiative and you would do that more often. Organizing all of the work is really hard, because most of the team members don't pay attention to the group assignments and only worry about their individual assignments.

Emotion:

I feel like you offer a lot to the team, but you can do more.

Consequence:

Otherwise, because there are so many uninvolved team members, we risk to fail the project, especially since the version management rubric requires that everyone contributes equally. You are one of the few people that has shown great interest towards the project and you can help compensate for the other team members.

Desirable Method:

It would be great if you took more initiative and tried to be more involved in the group tasks.
