2. What are my personal development goals?

Action plan: which activities will I undertake to realise my developmental goals?

Development goal (SMART)	Activity (SMART)	Measurable result (SMART)	Time completed
1. I am going to learn the fundamentals of the Vue.js framework, because I want to build my front-end development skills outside of the standard curriculum and increase my chances of securing a relevant internship	Complete a 7-hour structured YouTube course on Vue.js fundamentals, dedicating 3 hours per week to study and coding.). Alongside the course, I will build one small, functional web application (like a dynamic task tracker) to apply what I learn..	a functional Vue.js project uploaded to my public GitHub repository.	30-06-2026
2. I am going to complete an introductory AI development course, because I have a strong interest in automation and want to expand my technical versatility to stand out to potential internship employers	I will enroll in an online AI/Machine Learning fundamentals course (build AI-powered application e.g codewithmosh). I will block out 2 hours every weekend to progress through the modules and complete the practical coding exercises associated with the course.	A course completion certificate and one small automated script or AI-based mini-project demonstrating the core concepts I have learned.	30-06-2026
3. I am going to actively maintain my LinkedIn profile and network, because building a	will update my LinkedIn profile within 48 hours of completing any new IT project or course. Additionally, I will send out 5	A fully updated LinkedIn profile featuring at least 2 new projects/courses, and a network that has grown to 100 connection.	30-06-2026

Personal Development Plan (PDP)

professional online presence is crucial for finding internships and connecting with IT industry professionals..	personalized connection requests per week to IT professionals, recruiters, or alumni in fields I am interested in.	I am currently on 60 connection withing 8 week I have to reach my desired number .

Personal Development Plan (PDP)

Goal number 1
Old behaviour
+	-	+	-
Staying strictly within the comfort zone of the standard curriculum.	Limited knowledge of modern, in-demand front-end frameworks.	Gaining a highly desirable skill that makes me stand out for internships.	Requires sacrificing some free time to study outside of regular coursework.
Having more free time after completing standard university assignments.	Missing out on opportunities to build dynamic, interactive web applications.	Having concrete, functional projects to showcase in my GitHub portfolio.	The initial learning curve for a new framework might be frustrating.

What/who can help me achieve my goal?

... Online learning platforms (like Udemy, Coursera, or YouTube tutorials) for structured lessons.

Personal Development Plan (PDP)

Goal number 2
+	-	+	-
Avoiding the extra mental workload of learning complex new concepts.	Lacking fundamental knowledge in a rapidly growing tech sector (AI/automation).	Developing cutting-edge, versatile technical skills that employers actively want.	The material might be mathematically or technically challenging to grasp at first.
Sticking to familiar programming languages and concepts I already know.	Having a less competitive resume compared to peers with niche skills.	Discovering new passions and potential career paths within IT and automation.	Takes up weekend time that I would normally use for relaxing.

What/who can help me achieve my goal?

Personal Development Plan (PDP)

Goal number 3
+	-	+	-
No need to spend time writing professional posts or sending messages.	Remaining "invisible" to IT recruiters and potential internship providers.	Significantly increasing my visibility and chances of landing a great internship.
Avoiding the awkwardness or fear of rejection from cold outreach.	Missing out on valuable industry insights shared by IT professionals.	Building a long-term professional brand and learning how to network effectively.	Requires consistent, ongoing effort to keep the profile updated after every project.

What/who can help me achieve my goal?

Lionel Smith as my study career coach in my 2nd year
